

LIQUOR POLICY REVIEW: CONSULTATION SUMMARY (SPRING 2016)

Consultation Overview

Background:

- The City of Vancouver is reviewing its liquor regulations, The goal is to update the policy so that enjoying beer, wine, and spirits is well balanced with safety and community fit. Policy elements being reviewed include: where and when liquor is sold, made, or served, the size and types of venues that serve liquor, rules for liquor on patios and supporting no or low-liquor entertainment options.
- To help inform the initial stages of the review, members of the public were asked to provide their input in an online survey, sharing their attitudes towards liquor and the role the City should play in regulating it.
- From April 14 to May 25, 2016, members of the public were able to provide their input, and a total of 8856 respondents completed the survey. The survey could be accessed via:
 - Email invitation sent to Talk Vancouver panel members;
 - Open invitation to the general public on the Liquor Policy Review page on vancouver.ca
 - Social media promotion posts with links to the survey
- A sample of this size provides a margin of error of +/-1.0%.

Who did we hear from?

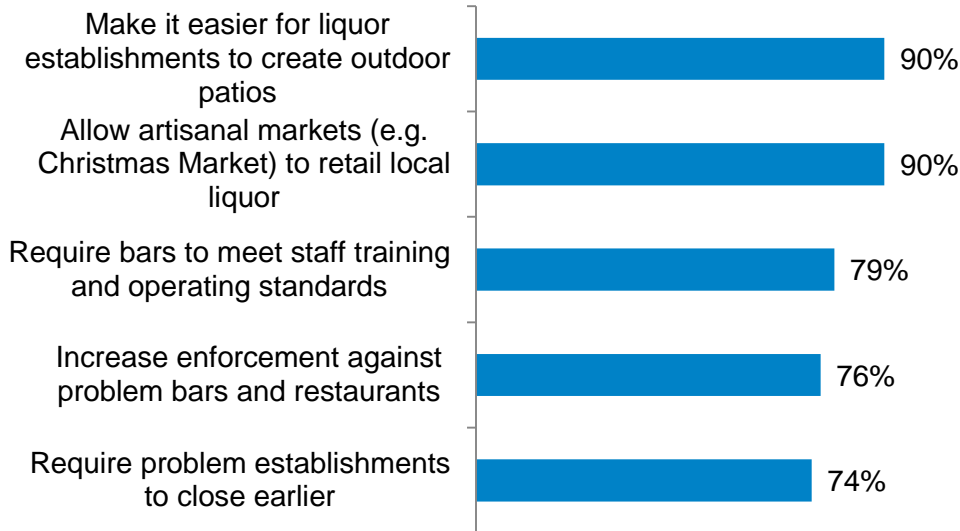

- We heard from a wide variety of respondents of different ages, genders and locations within and outside the city.
- These proportions mirrored the population of Vancouver according to Census data, but the results were weighted on gender and age to match those of the City (gender and age have been related to alcohol attitudes and behaviour). Refer to the demographics section for more detail:
 - 49% of respondents were male and 51% female (after weighting)
 - 24% of respondents were under 30, 53% were between 30-59, and 23% were 60+ (after weighting)
 - 93% of respondents were residents of Vancouver
 - 15% of respondents lived Downtown or the West End, 18% lived on the west side of the city (W. of Main St.) and 24% lived on the east.
